Art Unit: 2635

1. This Office action is in response to the amendment filed February 2, 2004. Claims 11-20 are pending. Claims 1-10 have been cancelled. The prior rejections have been withdrawn because the claims have been cancelled.

2. Claims 12 and 19 are objected to because of the following informalities: The claims should recite the additional elements as "further comprising" the keyboard. Appropriate correction is required.

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Messingschlager.

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 12-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Messingschlager in view of Danzinger.

Regarding claim 12, Messingschlager teaches buttons adjacent the scroll ball. Although these buttons may be considered function keys, it is not clear if they are. Danzinger teaches in

Art Unit: 2635

Figure 4a a scroll ball surrounded by function keys. One of ordinary skill in the art would be aware of both references since they both pertain to scroll balls located in keyboards. It would have been obvious to include functions keys around a scroll ball to provide convenient access to the desired function as suggested by Danzinger.

Regarding claim 13, the keys in Danzinger are cursor direction control keys.

Regarding claims 14-18, the assignment of a particular function to a particular key is considered an obvious design choice since there are various layouts of keyboards. It is generally known that similar function are more efficiently used if they are grouped together.

Regarding claim 19, it is conventional to mount displays to display the status of electronic device. Personal digital assistants use displays for status. Keyboards have LEDs to show status. It would have been obvious to use an LCD because an LCD requires less power to operate and provides a more flexible display. See Hunter reference.

7. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

8. Claim 20 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The specification fails to teach how to make the claimed finger print identification device. While applicant has cited a patent that teaches a finger print identifier, he has not shown that at the time of filing he had an understanding of how to make or use such a device. This is especially true since the Patent was published after the filing of the instant application.

9. The drawings are objected to under 37 CFR 1.83(a). The drawings must show every feature of the invention specified in the claims. Therefore, the claimed fingerprint identification device must be shown or the feature(s) canceled from the claim(s). No new matter should be entered.

A proposed drawing correction or corrected drawings are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. The objection to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

10. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
